

Dysart Reeve addresses FOCA

The battles waged between municipal councils and cottagers' associations over development issues are often long and bitter, and it isn't often that relations between the two groups are strengthened as a result.

As a former County Warden and present Reeve of Dysart et al, Murray Fearrey is a veteran of many such political wranglings; in Dysart township alone he contends with nearly 20 associations. Fearrey's views are well respected by members of FOCA, the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations, and when the group went looking for a speaker on municipal/cottage association relations for their spring seminar, Fearrey was an obvious choice.

Fearrey addressed some one hundred members of associations from across the province at the FOCA conference Saturday at Toronto's Humber College. His starting point for a formula to improve relations is essentially an optimistic one. "I do not believe that municipal taxpayers, associations, councils, and even developers working for a common goal cannot reach a compromise if the effort is being made by all parties," Fearrey told the group. "The solution to improved relations, as I see it, can be summarized within the context of three words: Confidence, Co-operation and Communication," he explained.

Fearrey went on to explore aspects of this view in his ten minute address. He places the blame for strained relations on both sides. "Cottage associations must shed the image of a pressure group or disruptive force whose self interests are placed ahead of the good of the community," Fearrey explained. He went on to add that councils, in turn, must recognise the contributions that associations can offer. "Many confrontations could be avoided if councils understood that cottage associations can be a definite asset. Seldom do I attend a cottage association meeting where there is not an exchange of ideas in which each body can play a useful role."

Fearrey fields questions at the FOCA seminar

Fearrey's concern for open channels of communication with cottage associations only makes sense from a politician's point of view. In Ontario FOCA represents 350,000 members today, and executive director Bert Shingler says the organization may some day encompass all of the one and a quarter million cottagers in the province. In northwestern Ontario, Lake of the Woods alone is home to 17,500 cottagers every year. Seasonal residents in a county like Haliburton thus represent a significant

Hope fades for road subsidies

After months of unsuccessful appeals to the provincial government, Anson, Hindon and Minden council is asking Victoria-Haliburton MPP John Eakins for help in securing subsidies for badly-needed road reconstruction in Minden Village.

Eakins told council at an April 14 meeting that he would approach Deputy Minister of Transport, Harold Gilbert on behalf of the municipality to determine whether the Ministry intends to supply aid for the streets damaged by the installation of a sewer system in 1978.

Minden council has been appealing for subsidies under the MTC's Development Road Aid program since the sewer installation, carried out by three Toronto contracting firms under the direction of the MOE, caused settling which damaged the surface of several Minden streets.

Councillors met with Transport Minister James Snow and MOE officials in November last year for an on site inspection of the damaged roadways, one of several inspections that government personnel have made since the sewers were put in. At that time Snow told council that both his Ministry and the MOE would consider aid for road reconstruction and requested a written report from the municipality outlining proposed reconstruction and estimated costs.

According to Minden Clerk-Treasurer Elinor Burke, the report, which was prepared by the consulting firm of Totten, Sims and Hubicki, identifies Main, Prince and Newcastle Streets as the principal concerns in Minden Village, giving an estimated reconstruction cost of nearly $1 million for the three streets. Development Road Aid would provide a 90% subsidy for reconstruction costs, leaving the municipality with an approximate expenditure of $100,000 for the improvements.

Following recommendations from Snow made at the November meeting, the report also proposes the project be financed over a three year period.

Mrs. Burke says the report was submitted to Snow in January. At that time council was told that Snow and MOE officials would review the report before deciding on subsidies for the project. Since then, council has been told by District Engineer D.A.O. White of the MTC's Huntsville office that no funds would be available for the reconstruction this year. In a letter received by the municipality this month, White told council that Minden's application would be reviewed if funds become available.

According to councillor Ed Perguias, who approached

Haliburton Midgets go for gold Saturday

The Haliburton Midgets are one game away from becoming provincial champions, and this weekend they'll be "going for gold".

That's how team manager Bob English describes the ambition of a club that has come back from the brink of elimination three times. The Midgets tied their best of seven final series against Langton 3-3 on the weekend, winning once at home and once on the road to set up this Saturday's showdown.

Haliburton's Dave Storey was the key in the back to back weekend wins. He put on a superb performance in net for the Midgets both days, standing up to consistent pressure from the big Langton forwards in an effort that repeatedly kept Haliburton alive.

Local doctors will not withdraw services next week

While doctors throughout Ontario are planning strike action next week to protest OHIP fee structures, Haliburton County doctors have mixed feelings about the action being recommended by the Ontario Medical Association (OMA). In a telephone poll conducted this week, all doctors who spoke with The Times said they were too busy to consider withdrawing services, and while most agreed that OMA demands are well founded, many doctors feel that involving patients in political bargaining is wrong.

Dr. Jeffrey Lodenquai of the Minden Medical Services Clinic will not withdraw any services over the OHIP issue: "I will not be participating in the OMA strikes," Lodenquai told The Times. "I guess I'm old fashioned, but I don't think I should involve patients in negotiations between the OMA and the government. I agree with the issues being raised by the OMA, but government negotiations should only affect the groups concerned," Lodenquai said.

Minden's Doctor Antony Holliday-Rhodes is more concerned with the demands of the OMA, but he will not withdraw any services over the issue. "Basically I've just been too busy in a town with just two doctors, to join in the fight," Dr. Holliday-Rhodes commented Tuesday. "We could do with more money - we are overworked and underpaid - but I personally am not walking out. In a place where patients are so far from emergency services it's just not feasible," he said.

Doctor Bob Heyes of Haliburton disagrees with the OMA's demands. "Frankly I think the OMA is asking for too much money. I don't see any doctors starving, but in a community like ours many of my patients are out of work. Any doctor who is not happy with the OHIP fee structure has a very simple alternative: he can opt out of OHIP, he has the legal and the moral right to do so. Doctors have already been offered 34% over three years, and, even though the yearly increase is not compounded, still I can't say that it's a terrible offer."

On the issue of withdrawing services, Heyes speaks for Doctors Pierce and Hartwick, partners at the Haliburton clinic. Their patients should not be used as bargaining tools: "We're certainly not going to withdraw services," Heyes said. "I don't think money is an issue that doctors should withdraw services over. The patient in this case is being used as a tool, and that's not right as far as we're concerned; that's not why we're in this profession."

"There are always those willing to support the strike, and then there are the scabs: I guess you could call us the scabs," Heyes explained.

Like Dr. Holliday-Rhodes, Dr. Harry Good of Haliburton feels he is too busy to take any action in support of the OMA: "I've been too busy to take any slowdowns," Good told The Times. "I don't agree with all OMA's issues but I think doctors have got to stick together. The other guys in this county are willing to take whatever OMA will give them, but they won't support the association," Good explained. He also feels that doctors don't enjoy the benefits they should. "Doctors don't have any indexed pension plan, and we don't get paid holidays or paid dental plans," Good pointed out.

Good said that he currently works a six day week, putting in ten hours a day or more to meet patients' demands. Good told The Times that on Wednesday, April 21, 1982

Saturday alone he saw 41 patients.

He also plans to bring in a partner, Dr. Adam Barnes of Newfoundland, in order to ease working conditions at his Haliburton office. Good says the move is the only way he can cope with patient demands.

While only the doctors of the Haliburton clinic really questioned the OMA's demands, all the doctors who spoke with The Times said their work load made any withdrawal of services impossible. Doctors in larger urban areas are more vocal about OHIP inadequacies and plan strong action to back their views, but the importance of medical services in rural areas has area doctors putting patients before money matters.

portion of the voting force and so FOCA is a body with considerable political clout.

Worried about new Act

FOCA members at the Saturday seminar had several topics to take up with Fearrey, who fielded questions for almost an hour following his address. Fearrey was asked his opinion on the new Planning Act being prepared by the provincial government, which will delegate authority to municipal councils to approve subdivision plans - if they have an Official Plan. "I'm nervous about the move," Fearrey responded. "I don't feel we have the expertise to deal with subdivisions at the municipal level. I have two fears about it: one, that the issue surrounding subdivisions won't be development but high taxation; and two, that municipal councils can be pressured a lot easier than the provincial government," he explained.

Again, Fearrey's final solution was an appeal for improved communication. He told the group that there should be an annual delegation to councils from every cottage association in their area whether there was a specific issue to be dealt with or not. He told FOCA members that such a practice would "create a spirit of co-operation rather than confrontation," and help to avoid the "secrets" and "surprises" that result when communication is poor.

FOCA president, Jerry Strickland agrees wholeheartedly with Fearrey's position. "All we ask for at FOCA is the opportunity to provide input before council decisions on development and planning are made," Strickland said after the weekend seminar. "Cottagers are basically concerned about exploitation of their resources. Things like ad hoc lake developments, tent and trailer parks approved with no public input; they become upset over issues like these. If decisions are reached without the knowledge of associations affected, before you know it, war is declared and its off to the OMB. It takes a lot of money and a lot of time and bad feelings are never forgotten. You can't win them all, but you can at least put your oar in," Strickland says.

Fearrey's plea for improved relations with cottagers associations encompasses Strickland's hopes. "I am the first to admit that improving relationships does not happen overnight; it takes time and experience," Fearrey said in his concluding remarks. "A good cottage/municipal relationship will never ensure total agreement between parties, but it will ensure your body a voice in the decision-making process."

Both Fearrey and Strickland have the same goal of good relations in mind, and while they both recognise the inevitability of disagreement at some levels, their views towards improved communications may help take some of the sting out of traditionally testy issues like development and planning.

GOOD LUCK MIDGETS!

Midgets force 7th game

Kevin Warburton provided four goals in Saturday's 8 - 5 win in Haliburton, and Steve Smith came up with a hat-trick Sunday, leading the Midgets to a 5 - 3 decision.

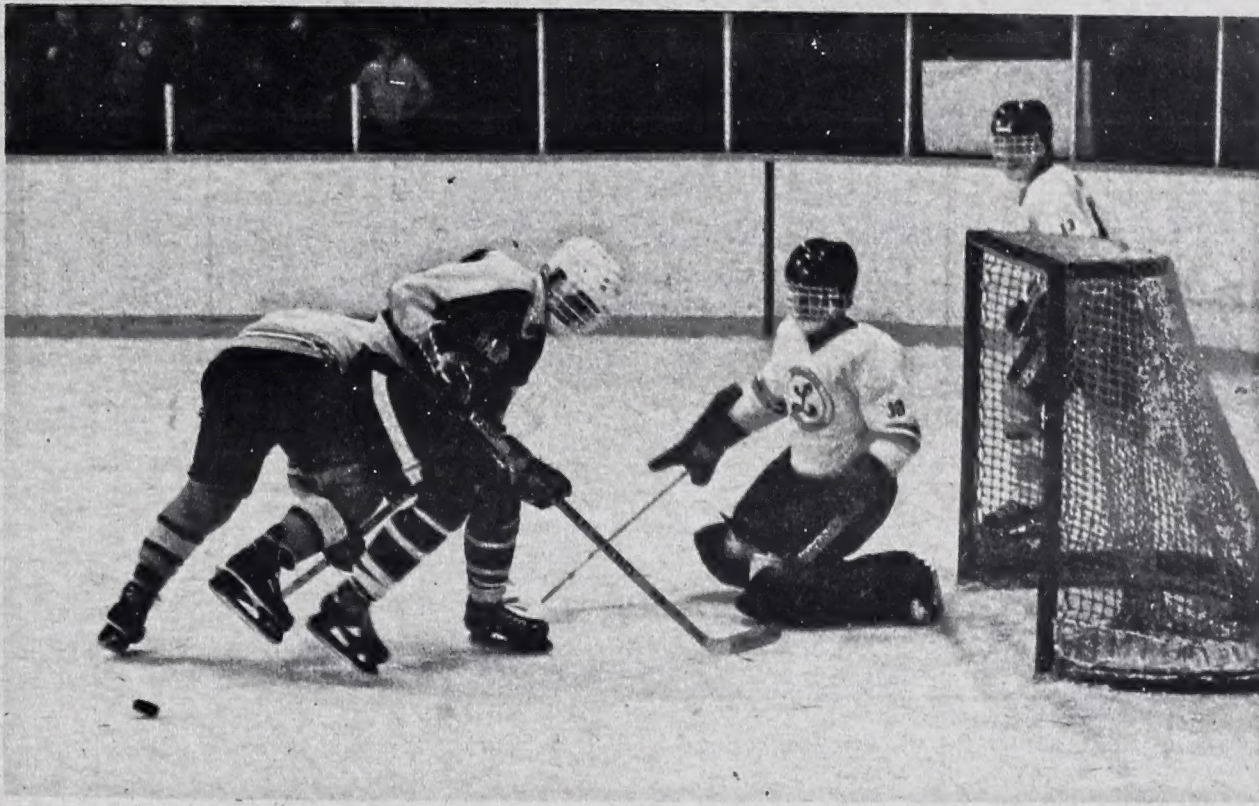

How did the Midgets manage to pull the series out of the fire? "Strictly desire," says manager Bob English. "They're all playing 110%. We couldn't ask for a better effort from anyone," English commented after Sunday's game. He recognizes Storey's contribution as well: "Dave has really come on in these past few games," English observed. "If we continue to get this kind of hockey from him, we'll win it all."

It wasn't always smooth for Haliburton in weekend action, however. Haliburton started big at home, Saturday, coming back from a 1 - 0 deficit to go up 3 - 1 in the last 39 seconds of the period. Kevin Warburton, Steve Smith and Scott Rae got the markers for Haliburton with Kelly Mitchell, Barry Boice, Bernie Upton and Jeff Bain getting the assists.

Haliburton's organization seemed to fall apart in the second, however, and the period belonged to Langton. The home squad gave up three unanswered goals in the final six minutes of the period and left the ice down 4 - 3. Haliburton failed to make good on several scoring chances in the period, while allowing some sloppy goals from Langton in return.

When team manager English talks about desire, he probably has Saturday's third period in mind. Down 4 - 3, the Midgets were twenty minutes away from hanging up their skates for the year, but the team sparked for four consecutive goals, and with 8:27 left in the game they were sitting atop a commanding 7 - 4 lead.

Scott Rae got his second goal of the day at 6:33 from Upton and Boice to tie the game at four. A minute later Kevin Warburton, who has been a standout throughout the series, drew the goalie to the right then deftly tucked the puck between the Langton netminder's legs as he struggled to cover the open net to the left. A minute later Warburton got his second from Kelly Mitchell, and twenty seconds after that Bernie Upton made it 6 - 4 for Haliburton, combining with Rae and Jeff Bain to finish off a scramble in front of the Langton net. It was Warbur-

Some extra muscle by a Langton defenceman thwarted this effort by Haliburton, but the Midgets took two games away from Langton on the weekend to force a seventh and deciding game in the Ontario Midget Championship series. The two teams face off Saturday night at 7:30 in Haliburton.

ton again at 11:33, making good on a pass from Kelly Mitchell: Haliburton 7, Langton 4.

Langton got their only goal of the final period with just over 13 minutes left to play, but Warburton finished it in style 3 minutes later, taking passes from Smith and Mitchell to go in alone on the Langton net; he made a move right and slid the puck across the line on the left side. That brought Haliburton within a game of tying the series and set up Sunday's contest in Langton.

The final period in Sunday's game almost went the other way. Haliburton took control of the play to build up a 4 - 0 lead early in the third, but in the space of two minutes and 44 seconds, Langton put three goals past Storey to make it 4 - 3. The teams fought it out for the final three minutes without a goal until Steve Smith netted the insurance marker with only 43 seconds left. Smith's goal took the pressure off Haliburton and they finished it out the victors by a 5 - 3 score.

Both games were played with fewer penalties than last weekend's scrappy matchups that left the Langton coach with a one game suspension. Although the hockey wasn't any less physical, English feels the refereeing on the weekend made for better games. "We've been subject to what I call tit-for-tat refereeing, they've been calling everything and it's cramping our style. We're a big, physical team. In the weekend games the refereeing was of a higher calibre, they're allowing the boys to play hockey," English observed.

The two teams meet for the final time Saturday in Haliburton at 7:30 p.m. It promises to be, in English's words, "A real barn burner".

Learning to listen

Dysart Reeve Murray Fearrey hit a responsive chord Saturday in Toronto when he spoke for a gathering of cottagers from across the province. The former Haliburton County Warden told the gathering that improved communications and co-operation is needed between municipal councils and cottage organizations.

Unfortunately, the message was only delivered to one side. Members of municipal councils would be wise to consider the suggestions offered by the Dysart Reeve.

Cottagers, seasonal residents and permanent residents have always had conflicting views about the future of their municipalities. One group favours increased development and expanding the tax base while the other group would prefer to see the unspoiled and undeveloped nature of the area to continue. Intertwined with these stands are concerns about the environment, industrial development, the relatively unstable nature of the local economy and the resulting high unemployment.

Fearrey's approach would not solve these problems. He did not offer a miracle cure, but rather a process by which the two parties would come to a better understanding of the other's position. He admitted that there would still be conflicts and disagreements. However, with better communications, there would be fewer "surprises" that tend to sharply divide the two groups.

The obligation to build this bridge of understanding rests with both groups. Improved and increased dialogue is needed and both sides must be willing, not only to discuss the issues, but to listen as well.

The message which the Dysart Reeve delivered in Toronto should also be heard in the council chambers of cottage country. If it is ignored by either party the result will surely be a continued wasting of energy on confrontation, energy that should be used for more constructive purposes.

Bill opposes supplier discounts

- by John Eakins, M.P.P. -

I thought that residents in Victoria and Haliburton Counties would be interested to know that my colleague, Jack Riddell, M.P.P. (Huron-Middlesex), has introduced a Private Member's Bill entitled, The Farm Products Marketing Amendment Act, 1982.

The purpose of the bill is to prohibit unfair trade practices in the marketing of farm products in Ontario. These unfair practices include the arrangement of price advantages in the form of rebates, discounts or allowances between some sellers of a farm product and some buyers of the farm product to the exclusion of other buyers and sellers of the same product. The effect of these practices is to work hardship upon the buyers and sellers who are excluded from these arrangements and eventually to reduce the levels of competition in the market for farm products.

Recently we have seen the establishment in the food industry of yet another buying group designed to squeeze more discounts and allowances from food suppliers. Dominion Stores Ltd. and Steinberg Inc. have now combined their buying clout through the formation of a buying group known as Volume One. This rapid concentration of buying power among the major chains through buying food costs to consumers, and a reduction in food suppliers and independent retailers. Last year the major chains controlled 75.1 per cent of the grocery market in Ontario, compared to 71.9 per cent in 1977.

Essentially the bill will empower the Farm Products

Marketing Board, on its own initiative or upon complaints, to conduct investigations of suspected unfair marketing practices and to issue cease and desist orders where such practices are found.

Significant fines and penalties are provided in the bill when persons or corporations fail to comply with an order by the Director or give assurance of voluntary compliance entered into under the Act.

The bill also provides that the Director make written reports monthly and yearly to the Minister which set out the names of all persons whom orders to cease engaging in an unfair farm product marketing practice were issued; all persons who entered into assurance of voluntary compliance with the Director; the number and nature of complaints received by the Director respecting unfair farm product marketing practices; and the names of all persons convicted of offences under the Act.

We, in our Party, are concerned that the purchasing policies of the supermarkets are reducing not only the number of food retailers but the number of food and food-product suppliers as well. Vertical integration in the food industry is already well established and it will be intensified as more and more small suppliers find they cannot afford the escalating discounts and price allowances being demanded by the big retailers.

Further we believe that there are a number of inadequacies in the Federal Combines Investigation Act or the Competition Act, as many prefer to call it, which justify the need for complementary provincial legislation. These inadequacies were detailed in the presentation by the Ontario Liberal Party to the Royal Commission on Discounts and Allowances in the Food Industry in Ontario, on September 27, 1979.

Simply put, what we in the Ontario Liberal Party want to see is more fair competition in the food market place to ensure maximum protection for Ontario's consumers and producers.

In last week's Times, I noticed in one spot that "The Women's Institute" was cited as belonging to St. Paul's Church.

The Minden Women's Institute has never been affiliated with any Church. Their motto is "Home & Country" and ladies of all denominations belong to the Institute.

The Institute is close to its 75th anniversary and is the only one in the country. It is an organization which quietly does what it can to live up to its motto.

I belonged to the Women's Institute before I ever came up here and have worked in this branch ever since. Now the Women's Institutes are world wide.

Anti-nuke movement spreads to Haliburton

The Muskoka Concerned Citizens, a group that is lobbying municipal governments to hold referenda on nuclear disarmament, is hoping to declare Muskoka a nuclear-free zone, and Haliburton County may soon become a part of that effort.

The group discussed plans for the move at a public meeting held last Sunday at the Gryffin Lodge on Mary Lake south of Huntsville. A Minden resident attending the meeting suggested the inclusion of Haliburton County in the plan.

Mrs. Sonya Holliday-Rhodes is now hoping to form a committee similar to the Muskoka group in this county to build support for the nuclear-free zone idea. Mrs. Holliday-Rhodes also intends to have the group work towards a referendum on nuclear disarmament while acting in liason with similar pro-disarmament groups.

"I personally would like to see the people of this county have the opportunity to vote

'Yes or No' on disarmament in the next municipal elections. In order to bring this issue to the people of this county a local group has to be established," Mrs. Holliday-Rhodes said in a report released after the meeting. She also announced another public meeting to be held May 3 in Huntsville. Both she and

Mrs. Louise Watson of Stanhope, who also attended the Sunday meeting, have told the Muskoka group that they plan to organize a bus to transport people from Haliburton County to the Huntsville meeting.

No one is certain yet exactly what moves are entailed in declaring a nuclear-free zone, but Barbara Scott of Gravenhurst, who heads the Muskoka citizens' group, says the practice is common in Britain, and that a municipal or county government motion is most likely necessary.

Scott organized the Sunday meeting along with Dr.

from the chamber

by Bob Stinson

What kind of a year is it going to be? That's the question everyone is asking these days. The answer is not very clear and there are as many opinions as there are possibilities. The answer will also vary with the clientele your business is serving.

There is no immediate sign of the lumber industry improving and that certainly effects a large part of our economy. To add to this problem the Madawaska Mine closing will affect about 400 workers, many of whom reside in our County. The only bright spot in this industry is the fuel wood business which is expanding rapidly. It is not economical, however, to cut fuelwood without taking the saw logs, and unfortunately because there is no market for the saw logs some of our quality timber has been going into firewood.

Tourism generally has been buoyant here but there are some signs for concern. The industry declined in the U.S. last year and we tend to follow their trends. Air Canada is now discounting domestic summer fares because their bookings are way down. Bookings to resort properties here do not appear to be down substantially however, but individuals seem to be booking for shorter periods and have some very definite ideas about just what they want. There is a continued trend among cottagers to take fewer trips to the cottage. On the other hand, because of this many private cottages are now being rented for a portion of the season thus creating more use of those facilities.

the MTC regarding road aid along with councillor Lyle McKnight at the Good Roads Convention in February, Minden council expected a reply from Snow before now. "We haven't received information directly from Snow yet," Pergolas told The Times following council's meeting with Eakins last Wednesday. "I'm wondering if the delay isn't due to an interdepartmental foul up at Queen's Park," Pergolas said.

According to Pergolas, councillors were initially given hope that the subsidy would be provided this year: "Snow was sympathetic originally," Pergolas said. "He told us in November to have the study done and that he would then be able to make a definite decision on subsidy," Pergolas said. But according to both Pergolas and McKnight, they were told by Snow at the February convention that there was no funding available at the time

The convention and meeting business is projected to be more active in the regional rather than national level and therefore the smaller facilities that we now have here will have great potential. The Chamber will be getting more active in this field with the newly formed bureau and feel this could help the area considerably.

The Honourable Rueben Baetz, the new Minister of Tourism and Recreation addressed the annual meeting of the Ontario Association of Convention Bureaux in Brantford and was very optimistic about the future of tourism in our province and of the role the new Ministry would play in it. He anticipated that Tourism would now enjoy a much higher profile in Queen's Park and larger portion of the budget would be available to encourage its development. Tourism expenditures in Ontario in 1981 are expected to top 8.8 million dollars he said.

Another speaker we were privileged to hear recently was Mike Vance who spoke to Resort Ontario members. He suggested that as we enter the "Third Wave" era there will be opportunities for many of us to capitalize substantially on the major changes taking place in our society.

The Anson, Hindon and Minden Council and the Ministry of Health have begun negotiations that may bring a new ambulance building to this community.

Councillors reviewed preliminary plans for the facility at a meeting April 14, and Minden council is now preparing to send proposals for the project to the Ambulance Service Division of the Ministry of Health for its approval.

According to Clerk-Treasurer Elinor Burk, the municipality has already received initial approval from the Ambulance Service Division, which will provide funding for the project that may amount to 100% of total costs. "The Ministry is in agreement that we should proceed," Burk said Thursday. "Final approval is pending more specific details provided by us," she said.

The Ministry has asked council to provide cost estimates for each phase of construction of the building. According to Burk, the municipality will be calling tenders for cost estimates. Construction is expected to begin some time this year if municipal proposals are approved by the Ministry.

Exact terms of the financing for the project have not been determined, but Mrs. Burk says construction costs will be recovered in annual operating subsidies supplied by the Ministry to the municipality. "The Ministry will be requested to include payments or debenture costs over a period of perhaps ten years," Burk said. "We're hoping we can go ahead with it this year because the municipal office needs the space now occupied by the ambulance department," Burk said.

Robbie Luke, supervisor of the Minden Ambulance Service, says it is not certain yet exactly what the new facility will include. "It could be a combination of what we think we need and what they think we need. Right now everything is up in the air," he said.

Luke did confirm that the new building will most likely be of steel frame construction and situated close to the present site of the ambulance service. "We're planning on two ambulance bays, one office and a crew room," Luke told The Times Thursday.

Burk added that current proposals sent to the Ministry call for a one-storey building 44 feet long and 30 feet wide, with height enough for office space included above working and sleeping quarters.

Municipal council plans to use the existing ambulance facility, located in the south wing of the municipal building, as additional office space once the ambulance service has been relocated.

Thrill of a lifetime for local players as they meet Wayne Gretzky in Toronto

When Minden's Robie Ackerblade got a surprise chance to meet Wayne Gretzky last week, his first thought was of his shirt: "I can't meet him like this, Mom," he told his mother as Gretzky's plane touched down at Toronto International airport Wednesday night. "I've got the wrong shirt on!"

Robie was sporting a Montreal Canadiens sweater at the time, but it didn't really dampen the thrill of meeting the Great Gretzky. Robie, brother David and their mother Pat were waiting for Mr. Ackerblade to arrive from Calgary when they were approached by Toronto Star reporter Jim Russell and asked if Robie would pose with the Edmonton Oilers' great, who was enroute to Helsinki to join Team Canada. Although the photograph did not make The Star, Robie still has the autograph to prove it really happened.

David, Robie and the autograph of the Great Gretzky.

What was the Great Gretzky like? "He's like me, Mom," seven year old David told his mother after the introduction. "He's shy!" Pat says the real version of Gretzky is even better than seen on T.V. "He's better looking in real life than on T.V.," she said, "and smaller too." The Ackerblades were all surprised to find Gretzky, at 5'11", shorter than they expected.

It seems Gretzky is not without a sense of humour in the face of constant media attention. While posing beside nine year old Robie, for a photograph, Gretzky was asked to go down on one knee and Robie did instead. Looking down to Robie at his feet, Gretzky suggested calmly, "I think I will instead."

The meeting with Gretzky may have been brief, but it will no doubt serve as inspiration when Robie takes to the ice again in the fall for the Minden Atoms. Robie had 54 goals last year for the Novice and Atom teams and was voted most valuable forward in the Novice tourney in Beaverton this year.

And while Robie and David displayed Gretzky's autograph on a copy of Hockey Illustrated for The Times, they made sure they were wearing the right shirts; they were both wearing the distinctive 99.

Style and themes varied in C-I-L exhibitions

- by Marta Scythes -

Both Haliburton and Minden are fortunate to have at present an exhibit of contemporary Canadian paintings on display in their respective galleries.

The C-I-L shows, which successfully opened April 6 and 7 at Minden's Agnes Jamieson Gallery and Haliburton's Rails' End Gallery give the general public an opportunity to view a varied collection of present day Canadian artists' work in a quiet, relaxed atmosphere.

In Minden's gallery at the Minden Library and Cultural Centre a wide range of styles, both modern and traditional can be found. All ages will enjoy examining the modern, abstract pieces in the Common Room, deciding if what they see is in fact relative to the painting's name. These pieces are well chosen as they represent a varying degree of abstract styles.

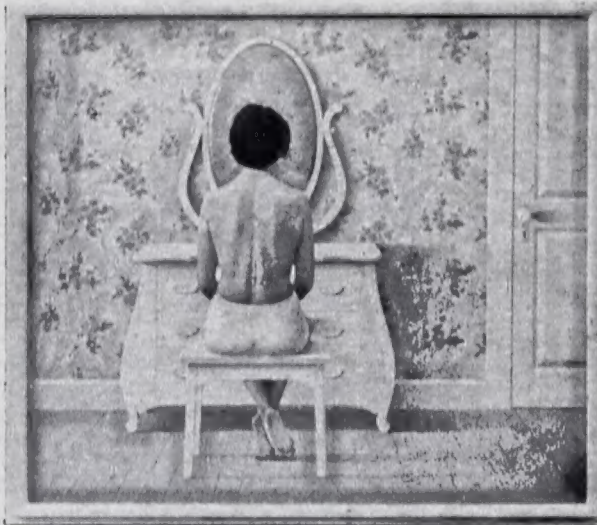

Of the 10 paintings in the Common Room, two were painted by women. (Sunflower No. 5 by Ghitta-Caiserman-Roth and Thinking Man's Ear, 1, 2 & 3 by Esther Warkov) The Sunflower has received mixed reactions, with most children agreeing that it really looks like a donut!

The other works tend more toward abstraction. The largest piece, Rosa Rose by Jacques Hurtubise, a Montreal artist, comes across as a photo essay of the same object in the same black and pink colours, represented in 9 square panels. At just a glance the colours are overwhelming, but many viewers have admitted the painting tends to "grow on them".

Children, (adults too!) will find delight in Adam & Eve & Pinch Me by Myfawny Phillips, a Toronto artist. The piece is a fun, intricate doodle-like painting with a title that makes one inspect the colourful shapes in search of an Adam & Eve.

On the dividing wall between the two rooms hangs a pleasing series of 3 abstracts, all enhancing each other in blacks, whites and greys, and a slash of red in the centre piece which catches the viewer's eye immediately.

The smaller gallery room houses 13 pieces of a more realistic style, with some venturing nearer to the surreal. These paintings lend themselves suitably to the average viewer who would prefer to be able to understand and recognize what he's looking at. Of the 13, five are meant to be viewed in succession. Beginning with Alex Colville's Children in a Tree, the other 4 follow from left to right ending with Sentinel by Ken Danby.

Christopher Pratt's Woman at a Dresser

Antoine Dumas' Le Camp du Pêche

All the paintings have a surreal effect due to their varying degrees of intense detail. They all convey a somewhat lonely, and in Darby's piece, an eerie feeling to the viewer. One may note that no faces are shown except the faded profile of Sally Wildman's A Solitary Mister.

The Colville seems to be of lesser quality than most of his well-known works.

The children climbing in the tree seem to blend into the foliage. Their skin is toned green and they have no facial features leaving them rather impersonal. One feels the power of the tree (of life?) engulf the small figures as they curiously explore upward.

On The Fence by D. P. Brown (a student of Colville) was the painting chosen for the poster promoting the exhibit. The child sitting on the fence gazing off in the distant field makes the viewer want to step through the glass into the scene and climb up beside him to daydream. The detail is superb as it is in Danby's Scarecrow which hangs next to On The Fence on the adjacent wall.

Following the series, we find two pieces; The Fishing Camp/The Camp de Pêche by Antoine Dumas, and The Brown Van by Phillip Surrey which again many people have said grows on them. Dumas has used a style somewhere between French Cloissonism and the Group of Seven and come up with a brightly coloured and unreal looking piece. The man lounging on the row boat depicted in the only subdued colour in the whole painting contrasts the starkness of the interior of the cabin, with a tranquil and relaxed feeling.

Christopher Pratt's Woman at a Dresser is possibly the most admired and certainly most talked about piece in the show. Again, no face is shown allowing the woman a certain anonymity. The extreme detail and cool-powder-blue crispness makes one step closer to examine the figure. There are no objects in the room except the dresser at which she sits. The committee took the liberty of choosing and hanging an oil called Possessions by a woman artist Jori Smith right beside the Pratt. An appropriate choice. The suspended Delft blue china vases and other knick-knacks could very well fit into the room in Pratt's painting.

Another painting, very small but with a strong impact is The Parting by Gary Slipper. It brings one into the world of fantasy. The lovely pink foliage draws you nearer only to be disturbed by the ugly and distorted faces of the couple. Their expressions instantly convey to the viewer the emotional trauma of their unjust separation.

Several other works are hanging at the gallery and all are well worth seeing. All ages are welcome and will hopefully enjoy the display. Get a taste of Canadian painting.

Hot jazz on a cool night

Haliburton County residents who dared to venture out Saturday evening, or who could tear themselves away from the NHL play-offs, were treated to an exciting and entertaining evening with the Climax Jazz Band of Toronto. The group of six musicians presented a two set performance at the HHSS auditorium.

The band stuck close to the New Orleans jazz roots, playing mostly Dixie Land numbers in lively succession, interspersed with some soulful blues.

While the music was enjoyed by everyone in the audience it took some time for the crowd to warm to the excitement of the band. The group is more used to playing in clubs, bars and hotels where the atmosphere and beverages help to bridge the gap between the stage and audience. With the chairs neatly placed, rank upon rank, facing the six on stage, it wasn't until the second half of the program that the audience felt relaxed enough to pick up the beat and clap along with the band.

Whether participating or not, it was obvious the Climax Jazz Band was a popular attraction Saturday. From the opening number to the close with the traditional 'Saints go Marchin' In,' toes were tapping and the applause was enthusiastic.

The Climax Jazz Band is a group of six musicians who began playing together 11 years ago at Toronto hotels. At that time the band members were employed in 'regular' occupations during the day, while at night they played jazz more for the love of the music than for the remuneration they received.

Since then they have become a Toronto institution and their reputation has

We had a snowy Easter Day, but a nice service in the chapel taken by Rev. Burgess, and assisted by Rev. and Mrs. Thompson, who leave this week for the west to witness their son being ordained into the ministry. We wish them a safe journey, and our prayers go with them.

No movies Monday night. Tuesday morning service in the chapel, taken by Earl Pitts. He spoke on "Who Crucified Jesus". Our girls came to sing and play. We thank them all for coming, this rainy, wintry day.

Tuesday night Payne, Deacon and Crowe came to entertain us, and put on a real good show. By the way, among our audience in the lounge we had four generations - Daryl Crowe (the singer), Opal Crowe (his mother) Beulah Hewitt (his grandmother) and Annie Cox (one of our residents, his great grandmother). As usual our boys put on a great show, but they won't be back again until some time in May.

Wednesday afternoon, ladies in the craft room, working, working, working, - doing this or that - the jobs they're never shirking.

Wednesday night is games night when we spend a social hour. Annie Cox won a lone hand, without any bowers.

The U.C.W. ladies from Haliburton served the tea party on Thursday afternoon. They served a lovely lunch.

We say three cheers for them. We had a visit with some dear neighbours whom we hadn't seen for years.

The bingo was put on Thursday night by the Kinsmen Club once more. Tedd Carr said it was two guys he had never seen before.

Friday morning down in the gym, where we play games galore, Mrs. Deumo won at throwing darts, she made a perfect score.

Mrs. Coburn and Norma came to play and lead us in singing some real good old tunes. Mrs. Coburn sang "Holy City", just beautifully. We thank you both for coming.

The Times hasn't been printing all of our letters, which leaves us feeling sore. If they don't print all we send, we won't send any more.

Spring has sprung, the robins are here, the snow is melting fast. It won't be long till it's all gone, and we'll be out on grass.

Economist offers shopping hints

- by Yvonne Gulda -

On Tuesday, April 13th over 50 women were on hand to see and hear the lecture and slide presentation given by Marie-Paule Green, Director of Consumer Affairs of IGA, at St. Paul's Parish Hall.

Mrs. Green, a pert, vivacious brunette, ably assisted by Peter Dollo of our local IGA, gave a very interesting and extremely informative talk. She covered the techniques of shopping wisely, with thought to good nutrition, organization in planning meals, comparison shopping, taking advantage of coupons and advertised specials. She also pointed out that canned goods have the same nutritional value regardless of Fancy, Choice or Standard labels. The Metric system, with regard to buying and cooking was also discussed, after which there was a question and answer period.

Marie-Paule Green is of French Canadian Origin. She is somewhat of a pioneer in her field, having been appointed to her management position in 1971. She regularly talks shopping to groups, including men as well as women, and assists shoppers in getting the best value for their dollars.

In spite of her heavy schedule, she is a homemaker and mother, she still finds time to be a serious pianist, also to garden, sail and ski.

Her delightful personality makes her a popular consultant and speaker. After the lecture, door prizes were drawn, courtesy of IGA, and refreshments were served.

Haliburton 4-H News

- by Ted Francis -

The fourth meeting of Haliburton County 4-H Veterinary Science Club was held at John Francis's farm on April 8, 1982.

There were eight club members plus leaders, Bob Barnhart and Dwain Wruth in attendance. We started the meeting with learning to give a needle to an animal, and taking the pulse of an animal.

Following further discussion, we made a rule of comparison between sickness and health and attitude and behavior of different types of animals.

We would like to thank Mrs. Francis for the very nice lunch. The next meeting of Haliburton 4-H Veterinary Science Club will be held at Dwain Wruth's farm on April 22, 1982 at 7:30 p.m.

2,000 trees to be planted

The Minden Scouting organization will again be participating in the Trees for Canada project this May 1. Members of Cubs and Beavers in Minden will be planting a total of 2,000 trees this year.

The Minden office of the Ministry of Natural Resources will be bringing 1,000 red pines and 1,000 white spruce up from MNR nurseries in Orono. Beavers will be planting 50 trees each and Cubs 100 trees, and boys participating in the project will be seeking pledges for each tree they plant.

Although the planting was initially conducted on municipal property, this year for the fourth time private land will be used. The planting will take place at the Ziorjen's property on Bobcaygeon Road. Most of the funds raised by the project will remain in the community to help support local organizations, while some of the money will go to aid scouting movements in developing countries throughout the world.

Organizers are asking citizens to give generously when Cubs and Beavers visit neighbourhoods seeking pledges this week.

Robie and David Ackers were two fortunate young fellows last Wednesday evening. While waiting with their mother for their father to arrive at Toronto International Airport, they met Wayne Gretzky, who was about to embark for Sweden with Team Canada. They shook hands and got their pictures taken with the hockey star. They also got his autograph. Needless to say they are very pleased.

We would like to thank the following people for their help at the Art Gallery this past week. Alan Stott, Dr. Jamieson, Barbara Elder, Jean Cox, Bob and Betty Herlihey, Wendy Wilkins, Bea Taylor and Daisy Bates.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul O'Brien of Ingoldsby are home from a winter vacation in Florida. They arrived home in a raging snowstorm. Their friends are very glad they're back again.

I am happy to report that Edith Coneybeare, who underwent surgery at Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay, is home again and doing very nicely. Everyone wishes her a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Graham and Michael of Huntsville, and Mr. and Mrs. Barkwell also of Huntsville, spent the weekend with Mrs. Taylor Kernohan.

In Memory of a Friend
There'll be another Spring I know
And birds will sing their songs
Far sweeter than you've ever heard
Upon the other shore.
Though now a shadow lies ahead
That must be faced with fear and dread
'Twill not be long -
For God will, in his loving arms
Forever free from all alarms
His humble servant, meek and mild
Who once again a little child
Comes back into the fold.

Yvonne

Hi! Hopefully winter is over after that one little blast on the weekend. The temperatures are supposed to rise again, and I've seen some insects flying around, so the next thing to contend with is the black flies bugging us. Oops, sorry about the pun.

Jeanne Cruickshank and her daughter Sheri, from Shelburne were up visiting on the weekend.

Joanne Oatman and her children, Joshua and Crystal from Shelburne were also up visiting over the weekend.

Major and Mrs. Lewis visited at Ridley College on the weekend.

Here's a couple of jokes for you seeing as I haven't got much news for you.

Small Sam to parents bringing home triplets from the maternity hospital: We'd better start phoning people right away, because they're going to be a lot harder to get rid of than kittens.

National Book Week April 26 to May 2

There is a display of Canadian books at the Minden Public Library during this special week.

For the Juvenile "serious" readers there are brief biographies of Canadians such as Kate Aitken, Wm. Berczy, George Brown, Gabriel Dumont, Wilfred Grenfell, Thomas Keefer and Hart Massey. These are easily read and have some illustrations.

For the juvenile in fiction is "Escape" by M. B. Fryer and this shows adventures of a loyalist family and gives the pioneer setting.

For adults, Pierre Berton's "Flames Across The Border" and this comes after "The Invasion of Canada" and is in the years 1813-1814. In this Toronto's Parliament Buildings are on fire and Washington also has a fire.

For adults in fiction is another story by Harry J. Boyle and this is "The McGregors", also a pioneer tale, but with the Boyle humour added.

These are a few from the display: drop in this week and visit the Agnes Jamieson Gallery as well with its C-I-L Art now here. Library hours are afternoons Monday - Saturday from 3-5 p.m. and Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, 7:30 p.m. - 8:30 p.m. The gallery has the same daytime hours, except on Saturdays until May 7th, hours from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Stingberry were having a little discussion. "Now, look, Alice," he said - careful to keep his voice down so the little old lady sitting in the living room, knitting, wouldn't hear him. "I don't want to seem harsh, but your mother has been living with us for twenty years now. Don't you think it's about time she got a place of her own?"

Alice gasped in astonishment. "My mother," she said. "I thought she was your mother."

Hint of the Week
Extension cords can be conveniently stored without tangling, simply wind the cord loosely and slip into a cardboard tube (from paper towelling).
